Free Your Pockets With CellKeeper

It seems like every time we go for a ride these days, our pockets are filled with keys, phones, cameras, cash, and credit cards, just to name a few. Other than being somewhat uncomfortable and disorganized, the pricey electronic stuff can easily get scratched or accidentally turned on. We came across these and thought they'd be perfect for holding our mini-camera and hitting the highway.

Each of the different CellKeeper models offers versatility in both looks and features.

The Sport model, shown in grey/orange, is made of nylon, and comes with a nylon strap with reflector band and durable silver-plated hardware. The Original (middle) is made from genuine leather with silver-plated hardware and adapts to your preference of cross shoulder or waist positioning. An added bonus is the detachable rotating belt clip. On the bottom is the CellKeeper Professional finished in smooth faux leather with plastic hardware and metal halter square.

Each of the models shown retail for $29.95. CellKeepers can be custom ordered for corporate use, motorcycle clubs, or group events.

INNOVATION IN THE BAG

These new storage bags were designed specifically for use with Harley's hard saddlebags. If you look at the bottom of the bag you'll notice the molded recess accommodating the support bar. On either side of the hump are two spaces. These storage pouches were designed to perfectly fit the uneven recesses in the bag's bottom. Once in place, these storage pouches create a level area at the saddlebag base. We use them to hold tools, a tire repair kit, and first aid gear, as well as smaller items that we don't want rattling around inside the bags.

The full set of four pouches retail for $69.95.
